IF THERE'S ONE WORD that defines Saugata Gupta, the 48-year-old managing director of Marico, it's dynamism.

The soft-spoken Gupta, poised to begin his third year as Marico's chief, believes that one must reinvent every three to five years, keep investing in one's capabilities and shun complacency and arrogance. This, he says, is a must for if you don't invest in capability and try to grow at a fast pace, things will not work out as planned.

The mantra has worked well for Marico.

Over the past five years as the Indian economy grappled to get widespread growth and bigger FMCG rivals struggled, Marico posted a compounded annual growth rate of 15 per cent in profit and 18 per cent in turnover. Over the past decade, income from operations rose five times to Rs 5,733 crore in 2015, and profit after tax rose six and a half times to Rs 574 crore.

The company's rapid growth and an ever-expanding range of brands has got the thumbs up from investors.

From a base of 100 in 2002, shares have surged past 5,600 compared with the rise of the FMCG index to 800. The company, about a third owned by global funds, remains an investor darling and has returned a 24 per cent average each year since listing two decades back.

Gupta, who joined the company in 2004 as the head of marketing, became the chief executive officer of the India business in 2007, and was appointed managing director two years back, is credited with leading the company's remarkable growth.

The Next Level

His recent achievements include identification of five sources of transformation — driving innovation, go to market, IT analytics, talent and culture, and value management — to help the company retain its top position among peers.

The son of a government official and an IIT and IIM alumnus, Gupta credits Marico founder Harsh Mariwala for providing a solid base for growth.

"My job is to take Marico to the next level and ensure the founder's spirit of entrepreneurship, speed, agility, culture of empowerment and meritocracy," he said.

A key part of that strategy includes improving the track record of new product innovation by getting into the premium segment of a range of hair care solutions and maintaining the leadership position in the oils and oats segments.

"Saugata is very sharp and incisive. He has a good grip on the business; a rare combination of strength in both strategy and execution. He is someone who constantly raises the bar on himself, his team and the overall business," Mariwala says.

Gupta focused on focus, implementation, reapplication and excellence (or FIRE) as key words when he succeeded Mariwala two years back. The main achieve-

MAKING A MARK

Saugata's focus on reinvention has fuelled Marico's rapid growth and led to an ever-expanding range of brands

The company's rapid growth and an ever-expanding range of brands has got the thumbs up from investors ments of this strategy were transforming the company from one dominated by oils to one that was synonymous with hair nourishment, wellness and the youth.

The success of his performance was amplified with shares rising 116 per cent from April 2014 to December 2015 even as the FMCG index at BSE rose just 13 per cent. The heavyweights in the index include ITC and HUL.

Focusing on Talent

Gupta believes that a critical element for any company to succeed is getting the right talent and leadership.

"If you don't have the right talent and leadership, growth won't happen whatever you may try," he says. "To understand the reasons for failure you need to understand why you are succeeding. One must learn from failure — what gets you here will not take you to the next level," he says.

This is how Gupta has created a working ecosystem of people who can be an inspiration and a source of learning for each other.

But as he progresses to the future, he hasn't forgotten his past. He fondly remembers, among others, his experience at ICICI Prudential life insurance and working under Shikha Sharma.

"My stint at ICICI was very valuable as learning; it was aggressive, fast-paced and cutting edge ... (learning) that I applied while driving changes (at Marico)," he says.

Bigger challenges may lie ahead but Gupta believes that reinvention will stand him and Marico in good stead.

India's Most Valuable CEOs

HOW WE RANKED THE CEOs

THE DEBATE as to how much the man at the helm contributes to a company's performance continues and will continue being debated in the times to come.

Interestingly enough, even Harvard Business Review's best-performing CEO of 2015, Lars Sørensen of Sweden's Novo Nordisk, admits that luck was the single most important force in achieving that ranking.

"How much do CEOs matter" is certainly not easy to quantify. However, there is no doubt that luck cannot be the only reason — talent, ability, charisma, dynamism and drive of the CEO impact the performance of a company over a period of time.

We started with a filtered database provided by Ace Equity, which took the BSE 500 as the base giving a large and representative universe to start with. To this universe, we applied a set of filters to generate a list of companies whose performance could be measured. The filters included: companies whose CEOs had a tenure of at least three years; had a trading history of at least 700 days in the last three years; where no losses should have been reported in the past three years; where revenues should have been greater than Rs 250 crore for the 2014-15 fiscal

We took the filtered database and grouped the companies into four categories: Heavyweight (revenues greater than Rs 20,000 crore); Very Large (revenues between Rs 7,500 crore and Rs 19,999 crore); Large (revenues between Rs 2,500 and Rs 7,499 crore) and Medium (Rs 250 crore to Rs 2,499 crore). Interest earned for banks and income from operations for other companies were considered as revenue for the purposes of this categorisation for CEO ranking.

The methodology to evaluate performance focused on a combination of financial and environmental, social and governance (ESG) factors.

We took into account the revenue CAGR and EBIDTA CAGR for the last three years and the weighted average Return on Capital Employed (ROCE) and weighted average market capitalisation giving the current year the highest weightage. We used compound average growth rate figures rather than absolute figures and also weighted averages to focus on most current performance. Each of these four

The ranking is based on the parameters, percentile measures, data and weights as outlined in the methodology and any change in the same would result in a change in the ranking outcome financial strength parameters was given a 25 per cent weightage to average out industry bias within the categories and a percentile ranking was done by category.

Environment, social and governance parameters were then applied to those companies that had a 50 percentile or above financial score ranking in Heavyweight and Very Large categories and 60 percentile or above financial score ranking in Large and Medium categories.

These parameters included existence of sustainability report; third-party assurance of the report and level of GRI sustainability reporting compliance; meeting of the 2 per cent CSR spend norm as per the Companies Act 2013; existence of any qualifications in audited financials; existence of 50 per cent independent directors on the Board; and external corporate governance rating

The overall financial score was given an 85 per cent weight and the ESG score a 15 per cent weightage since this was a more subjective parameter. We then once again reviewed the CEO name, role and ensured eligibility.

The top five in the Heavyweight and Very Large categories and the top six in the Large and Medium categories were run through a poll consisting of internal experts. The internal poll rankings were given a 15 per cent weightage to come out with the Top 3 in each category to constitute the Dynamic Dozen. BW
